Who Are You Church?

Titus 2:11-14-For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men, 12 teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, 13 looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, 14 who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works.

Endnotes

¹ One very familiar story in Luke's account is that of Mary and Martha (Luke 10: 38–42). Preachers often pose the question, "Which are you, Mary or Martha?" in sermons. This is an excellent teaching passage on taking the time to learn and be contemplative. In Luke 10: 39, however, Mary is sitting at the feet of Jesus. This was the position that a disciple took. It's the very same posture that Paul took when he learned from Gamaliel in Jerusalem (Acts 22: 3; cf. Luke 8: 35). What's so startling about this story is that women were not disciples of rabbis. Period! They received no formal education, and the only skills they were taught were typically household duties. Moreover, if a man instructed his daughter in the Law, it was as if he was teaching her lustfulness according to the rabbis (m. Sotah 3.4). Women were too simple minded to learn such deep truths, so it was believed. For Mary to have become a disciple was for Jesus to have elevated women. This one small detail in this story is often overlooked, but it is a profound truth in a short phrase. Luke shows that Christ elevated women to the status of a disciple (Luke 24: 10). (Steven Hunter, Being Phoebe: How Women Served in Early Christianity (Start2Finish Bible Studies), 13 (Kindle Edition); Dalls, TX; Start2Finish Books)

² Concerning the question of educating women in the Church, however, much is known. Whenever Paul established a church, he insisted that women were to be educated in the faith. He began this passage in 1 Timothy with the words “let a woman learn,” and while such a program would be in keeping with Paul’s goal for women, it was at variance with Jewish and Greek customs. Jewish women were not included in formal education. It was permissible for a man to teach Scripture to both boys and girls, ¹ but a woman could not teach even the youngest of children in a school, and one rabbi said that “if a man gives his daughter a knowledge of the Law, it is as though he taught her lechery.” ² Women were to be educated only in matters regarding homemaking skills. As one rabbi said, “There is no wisdom in woman except with the distaff.” ³...Just a few years before Paul’s death, Joshua ben Gamala instituted a law that teachers should be appointed in every province and in every town, that all Jewish children above the age of six or seven might be placed in their care. But this introduction of compulsory education excluded girls. Greek women, likewise, were not educated, except in the arts of homemaking...But the word for silence is a lovely word, hesuchia (hey-soo-KEY-ah). It does not mean simply refraining from talking. It means restful quietness, as in meditation or study...The difference between being quiet in order to hear someone speak (sigao—see chapter 3) and being quiet in order to listen with studious attention (hesuchia) is well illustrated in Acts 21: 40 to 22: 2. At the temple in Jerusalem, Paul was facing a hostile mob that was clamoring in such an uproar that the Roman tribune came with soldiers and centurions to establish order. The tribune had Paul arrested. But when Paul spoke to him in Greek, asking for an opportunity to address the crowd, the surprised official gave him permission. So Paul motioned to the people with his hand, and a great silence (sige, the noun form of sigao) fell over the crowd. Then, when Paul addressed them in the Hebrew language, we read that the people showed hesuchia. At his signal, they became still; as he spoke, they became quietly attentive. Paul was asking the same of women. He was telling women that they must learn, and to do so they must be quiet and respectful. Providing education for women, however, must have incited considerable criticism from family members and community leaders outside the Church. Any change creates resistance, but the matter of educating women ran the risk of moral censure from non-Christians...Moreover, the Jewish sages declared that any man who spends too much time talking with women “will inherit Gehenna” (hell). ⁶ Any man who taught Jewish women in the Church might be accused by their husbands of trying to break up marriages, or might be told that he was going to hell for his efforts. Greeks, when associating women with religion, would think of the temple of Diana in Ephesus, which had hundreds of prostitutes, called Melissai (bees). Any man who taught Greek women in the Church might be accused of catering to sacred prostitutes, or of seeking to entice women to enter into this position within this new Eastern religion.” (John Temple Bristow, What Paul Really Said About Women: An Apostle's Liberating Views on Equality in Marriage, Leadership, and Love, 70-72 (Kindle Edition): New York, NY: HarperCollins NY)

⁶ For example, in Titus 2: 13 and 2 Peter 1: 1, the KJV inaccurately translates these passages by splitting the terms "God" and "Saviour," thus distinguishing the person of God from the person of Jesus. They read "the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ." This rendering wrongly implies two persons are spoken of: 1) the great God, and 2) our Saviour Jesus Christ. Jehovah's Witnesses use this ambiguity to argue that Jesus Christ is not "the great God" but only "our savior." The King James translators translated the words this way because they were unaware of a grammatical rule of the Koine Greek—the Granville Sharp Rule—which was not discovered until the early nineteenth century. According to Dr. Wallace, "the King James translators knew Greek less well than they knew Latin and so they constantly relied on the Latin to get themselves through the Greek." ⁴⁴ This helps explain why the KJV mistranslates Titus 2: 13, 2 Peter 1: 1, and other places that clearly teach the deity of Christ. As noted, Greek grammarian Granville Sharp wrote a monograph in 1798 on the Greek construction of Titus 2: 13, 2 Peter 1: 1, etc., and formulated a rule which, despite claims to the contrary, has universally proven true in the New Testament. When defined properly, "it is found to be entirely without exception." ⁴⁵ (John Ankerberg, John Weldon, Facts on King James Only Debate, 20-21 (Kindle Edition): ATRI Publishing)

⁷ “The word we have translated as special (periousios) is interesting. It means reserved for, and it was used for that part of the spoils of a battle or a campaign which the king who had conquered set apart especially for himself. Through the work of Jesus Christ, Christians become fit to be the special possessions of God.” (William Barclay, The Letters to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon (The New Daily Study Bible), 289 (Kindle Edition): Westminster John Knox Press)
